VEVATIOUS RULES IMPOSED BY THE COMBINE.

New Methods of Sampling and Assaying Enforced—Mine Owners Will Not Submit to Any Unfair Treatment at the Hands of the Trust.

It may have been noticed that for several weeks past the local sampling mills have been receiving more than their usual share of criticism from Park City, and learning that the Ontario was among the number from which lots have lately been received, an explanation of the matter was sought from Superintendent Chambers yesterday.

For the past fifteen or eighteen years," said he, "the mines in Park City which have marketed their ores in this city have made their sales entirely on the basis of returns from the Mackintosh sampler, and in all that time I have known of but two lots of ore against which protests were raised, and in both of these instances a thorough check was made, and it was found that the sampling of that mill was correct. Lately the American Smelting and Refining company has seen fit to find fault with the returns from the Park City mill and has undertaken to demand that certain rules and methods of sampling and assaying of its own be followed, even to the treatment of the buttons from the assay furnace. These conditions are entirely at variance with former methods, and to check up the whole business, a portion of the ores from the Ontario, and from several other mines have been sent direct to the samplers here.

May Build a Smelter.

"We don't propose to place ourselves at the mercy of the smelter combine and accept anything they may decide to allow us for our product, and if it is not to our advantage, we will not submit to it. We are compelled to do so, I believe a combination will be formed and an independent smelter will be erected in the valley as soon as some of the more important contracts with the combine have expired."

Mr. Chambers was severe in his remarks concerning the arbitrary action of the American company, and gave it out that mine-owners would not submit to anything that savored of robbery or hogwash on the part of the combine.

It was pointed out during the day by a gentleman familiar with the situation, that even if an independent smelter were put in operation, its owners would still be at the mercy of the combine, as it virtually owned or controlled every refinery in the country, but it is possible that the same combination that would go into the smelting business would also put up a refinery of its own and thus become independent on every phase of the problem.

At any rate dissatisfaction is spreading and a storm is likely to break out at any moment.

Wants to Know If Government Is Responsible For Cost of Amputating a Mexican's Arm.

A perplexing question, growing out of the shooting of Mountain Sheep by James Olsen in Utah county some weeks ago, has arisen in United States Attorney Whittemore's office. It will be remembered that a Mexican, Pedro Laredo, attempted to act as peacekeeper during the difficulty. The result was no variation from the time honored custom. The peacekeeper was severely wounded in the left arm.

So badly was that member hurt that amputation was necessary. Now Assistant United States Attorney Cherrington would like very much to know what the government is responsible for on the face of the returns. Mr. Cherrington is going to drop a line to the attorney general and get an official opinion.

The papers in the Olsen case were filed in this United States court yesterday. They cover only details that have already been made public. Olsen has not been able to give long and detailed probabilities are that he will remain in the county jail until his case is disposed of.

What Shall Be Done to Save the Youth?

DISCUSSION OF PROBLEM

What to Do to Save the Boy Was the Topic of the Speakers—Proper Home Influences Will Keep the Lads From Going Astray—Duties of Mothers.

What to do to save the boy was discussed by the workers of Salt Lake Sunday schools at a rousing rally held in the First Methodist church last evening. The rally was called as a preliminary meeting to prepare for the state Sunday school convention to be held in this city the first three days of December.

Robert B. Quay presided at the meeting and made a brief address upon the many and great dangers that beset boys of today. He spoke of the three boys who were arraigned in the police court last week, and said that it ought to be enough to stir every parent to the realization of the perils surrounding their boys. He then introduced Judge George F. Goodwin as the first speaker to discuss the problem of offsetting the evil.

Judge Goodwin's plea was for the proper home influences. He said that the greatest danger was in allowing the boys to roam the streets, and that only the home influence could hold them. If the influence of the home is bad, nothing can be expected but that the boys will themselves be bad. "With the right home influences they cannot go very far astray," he said. "With the husband and father always down town, the boy is left to his own devices, and the great work of caring for the boy devolves upon the mother. If she takes the proper care, there is very little danger of the boy becoming a bad boy."

The mothers' duty.

Mrs. Sarah Reed asked the pertinent question: "What are we doing to save the kind of boys who are being sent to the reform school?" She said that the only way was by sending out delegations from the Sunday schools to their mothers. "If the mother does not care what becomes of her boy," said she, "she should be helped to do so."

Rev. Joel A. Smith said that the boy of today is the man of tomorrow, and that if he is to be a noble man he must be a noble boy. He said that the Sunday school must be made attractive and bright, and the boys must enjoy attending it, or it will not accomplish its purpose.

Something to Do.

Emma S. Parsons spoke of the love of the boy for the boy something to do with his hands would interest him and incite him to do his best. "It is asserted," she said, "that there are no street Arabs in this city. That may be true but there are a great many hoodlums. I believe in practical Christianity that goes out to reach the boys and girls and interests them in something uplifting."

A song was beautifully rendered by six girls from the Methodist Sunday school, and the Judge Twomey made a stirring appeal for the companionship of boys. "I want every boy to be my friend," he said. "If all men felt that way there would be fewer hoodlums and street Arabs. Every boy from my house to my office knows me and says hello to me when he meets me on the street. When I was a boy there was a man who was a great help to me and says hello to me when he meets me on the street. When I was a boy there was a man who was a great help to me and says hello to me when he meets me on the street."

Professor L. M. Gilliland, secretary of the state Sunday school, made a few remarks on the work that the board is doing in preparing for the convention which is to be held in this city in December.

Jury Awards W. J. Read a Judgment For Nearly $2,000 Claimed For Writing Big Policy For John Beck After Policy Was Canceled—Utah National Bank Sues On Old Notes.

An opinion was rendered in the supreme court yesterday in the case of C. M. Jackson vs. the Crown Point Mining company et al. appellants, reversing the judgment of the lower court in granting an injunction against defendant from levying and collecting an assessment of 1 cent a share upon its capital stock.

The respondent relied in the trial court upon a contention that the failure to file with the secretary of state a copy of an amendment to the company's articles of incorporation increasing the number of directors from seven to nine, invalidated the election of the directors and made the levy of the assessment illegal. The lower court concurred in this view, and defendant company appealed.

The supreme court ruled that this failure was not fundamental, as would be if a copy of the original articles had not been filed with the secretary of state. The court ruled that the injunction set aside and remanding the case for judgment in favor of defendant, the supreme court opinion stated that the respondent was only a nominal plaintiff in the action, as it set up in good conscience from shirking its obligations as a stockholder on the ground of the invalidity of the election of the directors which he assisted in electing.

The opinion found nothing in the record to uphold the contention that the assessment was not made in good faith and to subvert the best interests of the company.

INSURANCE AGENT WINS.

Sued For Commission On John Beck's Big Policy.

Judge Cherry's court was occupied nearly all of yesterday trying the suit of Willis J. Read against the Union Central Life Insurance company to recover a balance of $1,500 commission on a policy written for John Beck in the sum of $100,000. The plaintiff, as agent of the insurance company, received $200 on account of the commission claimed for inducing Beck to take out the policy, which was subsequently revoked on the company paying the insured a money consideration. The defense set up that the plaintiff was not a duly authorized agent of the company beyond what had been paid him.

The jury was not long in reaching a verdict for plaintiff, assessing his right of recovery at $1,500.83.

Judge Street represented plaintiff, and Judge Howat and J. T. Richards were counsel for the defendant company.

Stout and the Big Cottonwood Mining & Milling company to recover on seven promissory notes aggregating $2,750, secured by a two-thirds interest in the Silver King lode, situated in Big Cottonwood canyon.

August Hennegen and C. D. Hennegen were yesterday made defendants in an action commenced in the district court by B. H. Hatch, having as its object the enforcement of a judgment of $147.75, alleged to be due by reason of releasing an attachment sued out in the justice's court two years ago by Hatch against the defendants.
